
art show forms

Posted by Ponderosa - 2006/08/04 23:12

Because I'm trying to be good for once and actually pre-reg for the art show instead of looking pathetic and handing my money over the morning of... are the forms up and I'm just blind and missing them, or are they not online yet? ^^;

=====

Re: art show forms

Posted by Titania - 2006/08/24 17:24

Checking into this for you....

=====

Re: art show forms

Posted by Titania - 2006/08/25 07:47

They're there now -- http://www.yaoicon.com/art_show.html#forms -- sorry about that.

=====

Re: art show forms

Posted by nurikochan - 2006/09/01 12:06

So.... if we want to actually preregister for the show, are we supposed to send in the control sheet, or something? Even if we don't know exactly what pieces we're bringing yet?

=====

Re: art show forms

Posted by Titania - 2006/09/01 12:10

So.... if we want to actually preregister for the show, are we supposed to send in the control sheet, or something? Even if we don't know exactly what pieces we're bringing yet?

I would doublecheck with Kitsune, but the only form of pre-reg for the artshow I see listed on the website is if you actually mail in the pieces you want to display, so it seems to imply you need to know what pieces -- or you'd need to wait to register on site. If in doubt, drop her an email -- artshow@yaoicon.com.

=====

Re: art show forms

Posted by hibaakaiko - 2007/03/23 23:28

I have participated in a multitude of out of state showings, they all require plexyglass if they are going to be shipped to the show. Is this how you wish the pieces shipped. Are slides okay if they are not for sale? More over, is there a cap on what we should charge for them (I have a piece in my school's undergraduate show and it's for sale at two thousand dollars, if it does not sell before the close of the show, I will enter it in your art show. Is it acceptable to keep it at its current dollar amount?)

=====