Oh, there's plenty, don't you worry! I can't say for sure, but I'm reasonably certain the amount of guys there last time round reached triple figures.

If nothing else, there's usually about 20 bishies running around helping out with events, so if you latch onto one of them... ;)

Much fun to be had by all!

I also am male and hopefully shall be there this year. If all goes according to plan I shall either be going as Sephiroth or Kadaj..reason being as carrying the masamune is cumbersome and I have kadaj hair length so I won't have to bring my sephy wig..although i'm open to suggestions if anyone wishes to see either or...but if i do take your suggestions and your a bishy you owe me a snuggle...cuz sephy need snuggles...lots of them..

Re: male yaoi fan's

Posted by Neko_Bazu - 2007/01/24 09:59

Well, I've seen Sephiroth cosplayed several times there, and while I'm sure Kadaj and co have been done too, I haven't seen them. So my vote goes with Kadaj!

Yes, I'm one of the bishies, and yes, I'm open for huggles~ :D

Good lord, what an obnoxious comment... strangling motions

Given your replies in other threads, it strikes me that you're into yuri, but seem to be vehemently opposed to yaoi. In that case, you're probably not in an ideal place - while we generally have nothing against yuri (many of us even like it!), this is a forum for yaoicon. Take a moment to consider that, please.

Don't get me wrong, you're allowed an opinion - I'm pretty sure I'm not the only one whose feathers get ruffled by remarks like that though, so please try to be a bit more considerate?

Yay! Neko_Bazu came to defend us "ugly" yaoi boys' honor! :)

Anyways, that was a very rude, and uncalled for, comment evaligan. And, not to be mean, but it shows how shallow of a person you are, to say you don't like male because they are ugly, even though I doubt you've seen any/most of the males here. (I will control my temper and stop posting here before I say something that offends someone) Thanks Bazu for stickin' up for us! :wink:

Re: male yaoi fan's

Posted by ChiByakko - 2007/02/02 17:46

Heavens! Please don't insult the guys who come to Yaoi-con! Without them, Yaoi-con would not be what it is!!! Comments that insult other Yaoi-con attendees are uncalled for an unwanted. There's never a need to insult someone like this in a forum. I'm all for freedom to say what you want to... as long as there's really a purpose.

I like some Yuri couplings too, but as this is Yaoi-con, generally it's Yaoi-fans that are here, male and female alike. You might want to be aware of that when you post, so you don't alienate yourself from the community.

Lesbians and Yaoi-Con

Posted by Big_Mac - 2007/02/03 14:44

I don't mean for this to be taken wrong, so no offense meant to anyone, but why would a lesbian want to attend yaoi-con??

and then expect there to be no guys attending?

I mean the focus is on yaoi (guys with guys) and all the girls (and guys) there are there to look at yaoi (males with males) art, expression, and entertainment. The focus is not on the female form. Isn't there a "Yuri Con" that Evaligan would enjoy far more? A place where the girls are there to look at lesbian art and each other...

Ak...

Hard subject to touch, really. I don't personally think that I have some definitive standard of beauty or sex by which to judge others. Furthermore, my own 'ugliness' is subject to heavy opinion and, still further, people never know whose 'ugly' they fit.

In short: Get along. This is a thread for Male fans of Yaoi to network with and if you are not one and feel that we are bad for your con then please, by all means, make a thread about it in the off-topic section.

But for now, let's just be nice:

Another male fan:

I am Lin, AKA Goth Kitti, and this coming year will be my third run at the Bishounen auction as well as my final. I intend to cough bust out with a few new treats at that time but, as always, what I promise at these events is myself in my expression, nothing less or more. I welcome all of you new folks because Yaoicon is something which is a wonderful, joyous, and probably a little bit scary test of the individual.

Re: male yaoi fan's

But for now, let's just be nice
"Oh, be nithe! flappy hand" :wink:

In all fairness, Big_Mac, I know a few lesbians who would love to come to YCon if they could afford it - not necessarily for the yaoi (though they do appreciate it and enjoy it, even if they don't 'get off' on it), but to be surrounded by people equally as open-minded as them. I know that's my major reason for going - I could sit at home reading porn and ogling pics of pretty boys on the net very easily; I fly out there to be around the people~! (And to whore out my Englishness, but that's irrelevant :wink:)

As Gothkitti said, it's much nicer when we all get along - so c'mon boys, be nithe! :D

Anyways, I should have enough money to go for the con, I just need the right days off of work, but I am not sure if I can take that amount of days off. I intended to try for the 25th-29th, just so I'd have an extra day before/after the con to get everything ready for the flight and whatnot. But we'll see how it turns out later on in the year, maybe I'll be able to pull it off.

If all else fails, offer to make the extra time up as overtime! :D I'm sure we can make it worth your while~ ^_~

YCon sucks up hellish numbers of days off for me. Flight out on the Thursday, land at home the Tuesday after, plus time for jetlag (because 8hrs takes a while to make up!) - my holiday allowance is brutally raped every year, and they don't even have the decency to use a cornbrator to do it! T_T

Posted by dunno001 - 2007/02/05 19:07

(because 8hrs takes a while to make up!)

I'll be damned if I ever figure out how you people do an 8 hour lag, since just 3 was severely messing with me. I wanted to stay for the dance, but a little after midnight local time, my mind screamed at me saying it was after 3 in the explicitives deleted morning, as a large stack of something falls over in my head from it throwing a fit. (And yes, I did get a headache from it... -_-) Part of me would love to get back out there, but a few mitigating factors are going to make it hard for me. (I'm planning a move this year.) Plus, it feels as though a lot of the people there were regulars, and as such, already had their cliques, making it hard for me to try to talk to many people... -_-

That's something I am worried about also, but it doesn't bother me so much after I thought about it a bit. I can always just go up and introduce myself to some random people, though it'd be a bit hard since I'm a little shy. Or I'll just walk around singing to myself and buying some yaoi, and if people come up and talk then I'll talk to them.

:twisted: Or I could go on a rabid fanboy hugging rampage!

It's that British bulldog spirit! :D

8hrs, in all truth, reaches that point where it's so bad, it's good all over again. I basically assume I'll have no more than 4hrs' sleep on any given con day (I was up til 6:30 after the dance this year, just talking to people I met at the dance), so when you're mixing that with that much lag, the concept of 'body clock' goes out the window. I'm either awake or not; there's no tiredness 'til I hit the pillow!

As for you two concerned about not knowing people... Nyuu~! T_T tacklesnugglesmish Neko will always be happy to talk to/hang out with you when he has a free moment! Most people at the con are very welcoming and receptive, so even if you only have fleeting conversations as you pass, there's lots of smiles and a very wlecoming attitude, by my experience~

Fear not, you will be well looked after! :D :wink:

I used to be able to do that, until I lost all ability to sleep in due to work. (Being at work at 10 AM is a late day, 7-8 AM was normal most days.) Then my body adjusted (and revolted), and started going to sleep earlier. I'm sure if I were even talking to people, my mind would not have noticed, but... -_-

:P Well, my problem is that I'm a VERY shy person at my core. I find the analogy of being a baby chick in a shell constantly being reinforced due to being hurt works well, but I know that if I don't lessen the toughness of the shell, I'll die without being born. (Did I watch too much Utena? Maybe...) But, my enclosure means if I don't know you somehow, I'm not going to be the one to initiate. People from the forums here, well, you already know my personality, so I'm more likely to be open around you guys. (My online shell is very weak; and my real shell knows that if you've not hurt me in my online shell, it'll let you in.) Otherwise, well... I always tell people to feel free to ask me questions, since I hate rambling like this...

Truthfully, I'm not certain if I can make it either. Finances this year are much trickier, plus, I'd actually have to buy the plane ticket this year. I won't know for certain until about Otakon, and things will be tight time-wise then... but otherwise...

Update: I put in to get the 25th-29th off from work, so hopefully I'll get those days. Though I still gotta wait and see, then I need to find a Hotel near the Con hotel.

Re: male yaoi fan's

Posted by dunno001 - 2007/02/10 20:56

closes eyes Myu~~ =^_^=

Anyway, for me, time isn't the problem. If I want off, I can get it easily. Figure $300 RT for a plane trip and $200 for a shared room, and I'm already at what I typically budget for a con! (Of course, budget vs actual are completely different figures... I just make sure all my bills are paid before I leave, so anything over budget is not catastrophic.) Then add food, and the things I KNOW I'll want to buy, and well, I need to watch my money very closely even from now, and there's still Otakon. (Even AB is in the air due to my moving, but Otakon will have near no transport costs from my new place, and I've been going there for years.) I'll see how my cards play...

I'm either awake or not; there's no tiredness 'til I hit the pillow!

I used to be able to do that, until I lost all ability to sleep in due to work. (Being at work at 10 AM is a late day, 7-8 AM was normal most days.) Then my body adjusted (and revolted), and started going to sleep earlier. I'm sure if I were even talking to people, my mind would not have noticed, but... -_-

As for you two concerned about not knowing people... Nyuu~! T_T tacklesnugglesmish Neko will always be happy to talk to/hang out with you when he has a free moment! Most people at the con are very welcoming and receptive, so even if you only have fleeting conversations as you pass, there's lots of smiles and a very welcoming attitude, by my experience~

Fear not, you will be well looked after! :D :wink:

:P Well, my problem is that I'm a VERY shy person at my core. I find the analogy of being a baby chick in a shell constantly being reinforced due to being hurt works well, but I know that if I don't lessen the toughness of the shell, I'll die without being born. (Did I watch too much Utena? Maybe...) But, my enclosure means if I don't know you somehow, I'm not going to be the one to initiate. People from the forums here, well, you already know my personality, so I'm more likely to be open around you guys. (My online shell is very weak; and my real shell knows that if you've not hurt me in my online shell, it'll let you in.) Otherwise, well... I always tell people to feel free to ask me questions, since I hate rambling like this...

I finally caved in and have decided to join this event. Finances are tight as well on my end. I am hoping that my Father will be able to attend to my 5 pups and my home whilst away at this YaoiCon.

I can relate a great deal to the "cracking the shell" or perhaps..in my case..."the bird in the cage". It seems that there are stigmas and so forth associated with anything that is considered "Taboo" and in my case...even going to a store to find something that interests me in clothing...can cause the sales associate to gear me towards the more "feminine" and slim fitting apparel....when all I want is simplistic and comfortable wear that suits me.

I look forward to meeting new faces and traveling alongside J-Chen on this trip. How I do hope my pups can be watched over

It would be a pleasure to meet male Yaoi fans and female. Either gender...pleases me. Hence, in my case...I'm placed in the 'pansexuality' category. I am me. Androgenous(sp??..sorry)quiet and introverted. Cliques are everywhere...and when one is so quiet and shy..it is hard as Hell to just "open up" and start talking.

It's admirable that one can admit to being so quite and shy. Remaining in the shadows all the time. I still do that. I'm trying my best to open up more...but I know that no matter what...there are some personality traits that are meant to be...and some that are meant to change with time.

I look forward to the event. Probably the most social event I've been to in over a decade.

I can say, first-hand, that Yaoi-con brings out that social butterfly that you never had in you. I know, also, that people from Y-con would never on their silliest days call me 'shy' or 'demure.' I guess there's something about going up in front of a crowd of a couple hundred in frilly panties that somewhat precludes that.

The thing is that, in all seriousness, I am! Despite that, though, totally separate from the fact that I'm one of those luckyish people who adopts a performance mentality when on stage, I am overly comfortable with the overwhelming majority of the people at Y-con. I can talk, laugh, be myself, and not have to worry about being politically correct for the benefit of the crowd, all of which puts that generally superior to most company. I was just doubly lucky in that I managed to find a compatible partner at this same con (Or, more accurately, she found me. I wasn't looking until I knew that I was being looked for, but I'm glad I did).

Congrats to you Kitty.

All I can basically say is that there are some individuals (regardless of gender) that can be boisterous and just "out there". Some can be terribly obnoxious (and I don't find that a truly special trait).

I'm sure I'll feel comfortable here. When in company (that happens to enjoy the same genre of entertainment as I do) I do open up more.

Were you serious about the "Frilly undergarments"? I can only imagine how that must look.

"Politically Correct" and "conformists", butt heads with me constantly. I may be quiet and reserved...but when one challenges me on the basis of what is the "norm" and what is "taboo"...as my profile states on Myspace...

"Don't worry...I don't bite....I just shred".

Inasmuch as I had the time of my life, I am quite serious about the frilly undergarments. There are most likely still pics of it floating about on the net.

Yeah. That's bishie bingo. :p

I see.

I'll pass on the continual visualizations.

Due to responsibilities on the home front...as well as my own personal issues...I will not be attending the YaoiCon.

I came to this conclusion last night after speaking with an old friend...and it was made completely clear after meeting up with a friend from Ireland (whom I've known for nearly 5 years). Both males...I opened up about my possible experience here...and it sounds like a blast for those who really do have the time and so forth.

In my case...I do not. I also feel that as much as I enjoy Yaoi/BL...my point of view would most likely remain an ostracized one.

I hope everyone has fun. Perhaps if another convention arises...my personal opinions may change.

Eh, I am sure I've got the time off, and I know I'll have the money. My only problem is finding a room/hotel to stay in, if I can find that, I'll be there.

If you look around roommate and carpool section you will found ppl that are willing to share rooms, if not give me a message, I think I have room for more. :D

Edit: Eh, I think I found a solution to my room dilemma. I have a friend in San Diego who will be 18 in time for yaoicon and she will have transportation (a car), so we can find a room in a nearby hotel and just drive to the con. So, if all goes well, I will be there!

Add: Because I am bored and hyper... here's some up to date pictures of me.

I am near certain I'll be their, and I hope you can make it as well.

Re: male yaoi fan's

Posted by Kiravak - 2007/06/19 22:28

Well there are 2 major things holding me back from going.

1. Work(fulltime) and college
2. Nobody who lives near me knows I like yaoi... people where I live are very.. uh anti-yaoi... or should I say homophobic.

Geez <_< you don't need to be gay to like yaoi. I know several girls who like watching other girls do lesbian stuff but aren't lesbians themselves.

Re: male yaoi fan's

Posted by Helc - 2007/06/19 22:31

Hell nobody that lives here knows I like yaoi, but I am still going. Then again, I had just enough vacation time from work and I don't go to college, so I've got nothing else holding me back. But still, I wish you luck, hopefully you'll find the time, and courage, to go.

Don you worry, you ain't alone! I lived in PA too. So you could give me a shout when you are bore, or just want some one to gogle bout some smexy yaoi goodness, i am here. I don have any friend that's into yaoi, no one that lives near me anyway. So it will be so cool if we could be friends and stuff, ya know. :?

Ah, my precious computer... clutches tightly How I've missed thee... but there are posts to respond to...

It's admirable that one can admit to being so quite and shy. Remaining in the shadows all the time. I still do that. I'm trying my best to open up more...but I know that no matter what...there are some personality traits that are meant to be...and some that are meant to change with time.

Well, there's a triangle of problems I see within myself that keep this shell reinforced. My shyness I've already addressed. The other 2, depression and isolationism, keep the shell strong. If I can remove any one of these points, it breaks the triangle, therefore cracking my shell, as what's left is a line, which has no area to hold me. (And let's avoid the technicalities of an egg being spherical with volume, okay?) I don't expect to be able to get rid of all 3, but I do need one of them to change.

As for cons, though, they really are my only time to socialize in person. Something about a con keeping me running and keeps my head up in cloud 9, and I'm happy. Hence, no depression, and I'm more willing to be open at cons, knowing that everyone there has something in common with me- and it's something I like. (The isolationism though, means I'll be damned if I know how to start a conversation...) Cons are a vacation for me; I can throw away who I am for real, and bring out part of my online persona, which I vastly prefer to the me outside of the con.

Unfortunately, after this move, if I've not already said it, my odds of getting out there this year have been set in place to be 0%. As things are now, even Otakon is going to be barely affordable, and this is even after negotiating with some people in the area to remove both the travel and hotel costs from the budget. If I go a full year without a con (since last Yaoicon was the last con I've been to), well, let's just say that my viper's tongue will come out, and it will be VERY sharp. No vaca makes me very grumpy...
