
Dance Dance Revolution / In the Groove

Posted by Irvine - 2006/04/26 08:10

With DDR SuperNOVA coming out (finally, another new arcade DDR machine!), and In the Groove 2 still hitting arcades nationwide, what's your favorite DDR or In the Groove song? What's the hardest song you can play? Are you a Doubles (both sides of the pad) player? Have you ever played a Solo mix (6 pads instead of four) arcade machine? How many modifiers can you stack? Tell us about it here~! :)

As for me, I used to play a lot. I don't as much these days. I can beat some 11 difficulty songs on In the Groove (Utopia and Charlene on Expert), and I can beat one 10 foot difficulty song on Double in DDR, that song being Sakura (Heavy). I can also beat Max 300, Paranoia Survivor, and Maxx Unlimited on Single... which are also 10 foot songs. I can also stack 15 rankable modifiers on some In the Groove Expert songs.

Don't be shy... tell us about you! Can you freestyle? Do you play at home on a soft or hard pad? What got you in to dancing games? Have you lost any weight playing? Let us know~!

Awesome~! Can you beat Rhythm and Police on Maniac? That was one of my favorite songs that appeared on 5th Mix... along with Era (and every other TaQ song on that mix), B4U Glorious Style, Tribal Dance, Dancing All Alone, The Cube, Dub-I-Dub, Young Forever, and of course Sana. <3 Damn I miss having that mix around these days. ;_;

I play at home... On my girlfriend's DDR soft pad that she so graciously let me borrow.

I'm not terribly good. I can get A-AA's on most of the Light mode songs, but I can't do the next level or higher up. I don't really have that drive or desire to play at a higher level, though. I'm pretty happy being a peon xD.

My favorite song to do is Pink Rose n.n ...Is that from DDR Extreme? Oh bother... I'm too lazy to go downstairs and look... :oops:

The phrase "not terribly good" and "A-AA's" don't really belong together if you're referring to DDR. ^^ You obviously have some skill if you're that accurate! It's been forever since I stepped on a soft pad... they're really comfortable to play on. I've only played on arcade machines except at the occasional party, myself. It always feels weird playing in socks! :D

Pink Rose first appeared in a Keyboard Mania game, if I remember correctly... and it probably appeared in the game Star Ocean long before that as well. I love that song, as do some of my friends... and it always makes me think about how fun it was to play Star Ocean when I'm dancing to that song. DDR Extreme was the first DDR to have Pink Rose.

:oops: T_T But... But I can't even make it through an entire song on the next level higher...

But thank you very much for the compliments n.n

I listen to Pink Rose on my computer @.@ I dunno, it's just so... So catchy. I don't recommend singing along as your DDRing, though. It's exhausting >.>

never played on anything but the softpad How different is it to use a machine? @.@?

Well, technically it's even a different size...

First of all, the sensors you step on are spread out further... and you can't slide your feet over from one to another as well, as there are screws and a generally less slick metal surface in your way. It's still very possible to slide your feet (I do it all the time), but it's much easier to muddle your way through a song on a soft pad by barely moving your feet.

For example, I passed a 10 foot difficulty song on a soft pad while drunk. I was able to do this as uncoordinated as I was at the time (and naked, with a drunk Oni and other Yaoi-Con attendees actually watching for that matter!) because I just slid my feet back and forth between two sensors for each foot. I barely passed, saving myself from taking more shots! XD

I pass out compliments only when they are deserved. :) You're welcome.

Ouu o.o How exhilarating @.@! You must be awesome!

I should try to find a machine to play on... When no one is around... xD Good luck finding something like that, unless I go to the mall on a weekday morning e.e;

I'm unsure if I slide my feet or not... My girlfriend says that I "bounce" through the song xDD

Thank you for your kind words. ^^ I just used to play too often. Yeah, we were playing a drinking game called Drunk Drunk Revolution that some friends and I have developed over the years. Usually, it goes like this... we assign people a difficulty, then pick a song on Random/Roulette. They play the song on their difficulty... and if they get an A or a B, they're safe. Scoring a C or D makes them drink a shot.

What gets interesting is if they fail the song or otherwise get an E. They then have to drink two shots, which basically causes a downward spiral. evil grin Also... if the player before you scores a AA or AAA, they get to pick a song for the next person. lol Evil, huh?

That sounds like a very, very fun game! I wish I could play... Though I'm sure I would do an awful, awful job at it. I'm 5'6 and 115 lbs.- In other words, I seriously cannot handle my liquor xD I'd be the girl who passes out on the machine e.e;

That worked out okay, since they still got drunk off twelve sips faster than I did off twelve shots anyway. cackle I used to drink too much, apparently. ;)

You sound so petite~! I look forward to seeing you play one day. ^^ If you ever decide that you do want to play songs on Standard, I can teach you how. :)

Ouu! n.n! That sounds like fun! I want to learn the ways of standard T_T! pumps fist

And what a good development in the game for those with weak constitutions (Is that the right word? xD I don't know...). I'm going to practice really hard! ...Is there DDR at Yaoicon? o.o?

There probably will be DDR and/or In the Groove at Yaoi-Con (it's been there for many years now), though it'll most likely be a home version with some decent soft or hard pads. That would work just fine for teaching you, nonetheless. ^^ I'm glad that you approve of our "sipping" rule~! Yes, I'm sure that the word "constitution" would be just fine to use for your less-than-stellar alcohol tolerance. ;)

I may actually even buy something by the time the convention rolls around, but we'll see. You should tell these guys what you can do... you're like twice as good as me at DDR and In the Groove!

This guy can pass Expert 12/13 songs, and scores two or three stars on songs that I have trouble completing!

Thanks for the compliments. So far I just passed all the 12s in ITG and a 13, and I've beaten everything in DDR. And Irvine next time you have one of those DDR drinking parties give me a call, those sound fun. I'm also planning on getting a metal pad over summer, of which I will donate to the convention For the weekend.

whimpers You people talking about passing 12's and the like scares me. I plateaued a while ago at being able to do most DDR 6s and a few 7s, but then life took over, and I've not been able to play it as much as I want to. I prolly could still pass a 6, but a slew would prolly kill me again. And the thought of me doing something like Drunk Drunk would prolly have me out with my rather poor ability and inexperience drinking. (I've never been drunk in my life.)

Anyway, that aside, I'm an old-time gamer, and that applies to the DDRs also. I prefer the old 3rd mix songs. (Of course, So Many Men may have me slightly biased toward that...) But Solo... yes, I like that mode also, even if I've never seen an arcade 6-panel. So it has to be played at home. And I've had it with the cheap pads, I went for the mid-grade ones with the inch-thick foam. I'd love a home metal one, but I have nowhere to keep it.

it seems like no one's posted in this thread for awhile, but oh well!

its okay dunno001, i am a fellow plateau-er as well. I've been playing DDR off and on for years...and I go through phases where I play religiously, and then not play for months and months. When I'm serious, I train for an hour-ish a day with 3 pound ankle weights, doing heavy singles and standard doubles. For now, and sadly for the rest of my years, the hardest i can probably do would be 10-ish feet on heavy single, and maybe 5-6 feet on standard double? i dont know, i dont really pay attention. I love DDR to pieces, but it's so hard to keep up with all my obsessions! rargh...

and I use foam pads too! I wish I had the money for a metal pad, but i can afford one for home use as much as i can afford to play DDR at arcades. -_-;;

and oh yeah, ITG rules too! I think I like DDR better just cuz its so classic and japanese :)

Yeah, obsessions suck time. And that's something I don't have. However, I did invest in the ankle weights, since last time I played at the arcade (a few months ago), there were only a few people there, and one of them was letting others use the 2 lb ones he had, and yeah, it was a definite workout, so I went and got 5 lb ones myself. They'll kill me... once I get the time to use them.

However, I did plateau because of the elitist attitude that a lot of the players in this area have about the game. Because of the Japanese versions, I was one of the first in the arcade to do trick/another/standard/whatever you want to call it, but when the mallrats got better, it was constant ridicule if you didn't play on maniac (or whatever). That stopped me for a while, and every time I get the urge to go back to it, I have to rebuild up my stamina for it. So I just never get better. Now the arcade has ITG2, and well... those tri and quad hits are a pain. But again, there's no real good way to practice those...
