
Enka!

Posted by Experimental - 2006/04/16 15:03

I'm a dork, but I was surfing yesasia again and just wondering if there are any fans of yaoi here who are also fans of enka. (Fat chance, since enka isn't exactly conducive to slash unless you like Kita/Yaji , but no harm trying.) Whether you listen, sing, or are just in it for that kitschy sound; like gushing about Kiyoshi or might be interested in karaoke come con time. nudge nudge

For those who don't know what enka is, the easiest way to describe it is perhaps to say enka is to Japan what country music is to the States, but think Patsy instead of Shania. You've probably heard it before and not realized it: Kaji Meiko's songs for a couple of her movies, including the first Lady Snowblood, were featured in Kill Bill ("Urami Bushi" and "Shura no Hana" aka "Flower of Carnage"). Or you might know it through Misora Hibari, who first popularized the genre in the 1950s, or Hikawa Kiyoshi who led the revival in this century with "Kiyoshi no Zun-doko Bushi"--which is parodied, like, everywhere, including Shinobu in Honey and Clover.

If you do know what I'm talking about and are (god forbid) into it, for goodness sake speak up. Don't leave me lonely! XD

=====

Re: Enka!

Posted by Q-chan - 2006/04/29 23:23

You know... I think I might actually know what you are talking about. I'm going to do some further research to see if it is xD

...And if it is what I think it is, I love it to bits xD

Edit: AAAAHHH! IT'S WHAT I THOUGHT IT WAS! dies I didn't know anyone else liked this T____T!

=====

Re: Enka!

Posted by Experimental - 2006/05/09 11:08

No shit? That's freakin awesome! Now there are two we can have an enkoff! :D

Seriously, I totally feel the same way. It's so not accessible in this country. I was into it for a couple years before I even found out it was a genre with an actual name. An inflight Japanese station on a plane to Hawaii got me hooked. ~__~ It was half enka and introduced me to Hosokawa Takashi, who's gotta be, like, the Roy Orbison of Japan (in my weird little mind).

=====

Re: Enka!

Posted by Q-chan - 2006/05/09 12:08

LOL An Enkoff? That sounds lovely xD

Yeah, I just think it's so amazing how they do that with their voices @.@; And it just... it just... T____T bursts

Roy Orbison sounds -so- familiar.

I think my love for Enka started when I got into old Japanese films. I'm afraid I haven't been able to learn as much as you have, but I am willing to learn! throws herself down on her knees O Wise One, Teach Me!

...listens to Enka under a waterfall...?

=====

Re: Enka!

Posted by Saya - 2006/05/10 11:35

I'm a dork, but I was surfing yesasia again and just wondering if there are any fans of yaoi here who are also fans of enka. (Fat chance, since enka isn't exactly conducive to slash unless you like Kita/Yaji , but no harm trying.) Whether you listen, sing, or are just in it for that kitschy sound; like gushing about Kiyoshi or might be interested in karaoke come con time. nudge nudge

For those who don't know what enka is, the easiest way to describe it is perhaps to say enka is to Japan what country music is to the States, but think Patsy instead of Shania. You've probably heard it before and not realized it: Kaji Meiko's songs for a couple of her movies, including the first Lady Snowblood, were featured in Kill Bill ("Urami Bushi" and "Shura no Hana" aka "Flower of Carnage"). Or you might know it through Misora Hibari, who first popularized the genre in the 1950s, or Hikawa Kiyoshi who led the revival in this century with "Kiyoshi no Zun-doko Bushi"--which is parodied, like, everywhere, including Shinobu in Honey and Clover.

If you do know what I'm talking about and are (god forbid) into it, for goodness sake speak up. Don't leave me lonely! XD Hehe, I grew up on Korean enka... My mom loves listening to the Japanese enka stars on the New Years Day Celebration Show!! Red vs. White :D I'm surprised anyone knows what enka is!! XD

Re: Enka!

Posted by Irvine - 2006/05/10 13:15

It was half enka and introduced me to Hosokawa Takashi, who's gotta be, like, the Roy Orbison of Japan (in my weird little mind).

I've heard of this somewhere. ^^ Coincidentally, my dad used to play Roy Orbison in the car all the time back when I was a lot younger... so I was exposed to that genre early on, whether I wanted to be or not. grin

Re: Enka!

Posted by Experimental - 2006/05/10 19:13

Oh, I'm not all that versed in Roy Orbison. I just think Hosokawa Takashi looks like him for some reason. (Then again I was always confusing Roy Orbison and Don Ho, so what do I know. @^^@) But from what little I know, they seem to have kind of similar styles.

Red & White Song Competition!!! hearts I love Kohaku! It's top of cool, man! I just love the whole idea and wish I had NHK where I live so I wouldn't have to rent some yakuza dude's recorded copy every year. <:(I've heard some Teresa Teng, but I'm not familiar with Korean enka. Any recommendations?

Yeah, I just think it's so amazing how they do that with their voices @.@; And it just... it just... T____T bursts Oh, I know! Those hometown songs make me tear up. I wish I could learn. Kiyoshi started in a high school enka club, apparently. Totally jealous.

Yeah. We need to find a karaoke place that has enka at this con.

Re: Enka!

Posted by Q-chan - 2006/05/11 03:49

Dude o.o Enka Karaoke sounds like tons of fun... But I don't want to be the cause of others' bleeding ears... T_T

...Oh, what the hell! It's for the love of ENKA! All your Enka are belong to us. snuggles Experimental

Re: Enka!

Posted by Experimental - 2006/07/21 13:04

Dude, it's enka! If people's ears aren't bleeding you're not trying hard enough! :)

Just thought I'd share this link. Behold the wonders of YouTube:

<http://youtube.com/watch?v=c22GDeuBaO8&search=hikawa%20kiyoshi>

=====